

"Universe in Disenchantment" 1st volume.

Every human being is born with an innate longing for answers, a calling to discover a truth beyond material existence. Seekers of transcendence look inward, exploring the pineal gland or awakening the third eye, sensing a hidden capacity to perceive a higher reality. We look for solutions to existential fatigue and life's instabilities, wondering why our world feels so fragmented. Though humanity turns to conventional philosophy and science, we remain trapped in endless questioning. This book emerges as a definitive, positive exposure designed to fulfill this quest, revealing that our current condition is merely a transitional phase of a grander cosmic journey. When describing the material world as an enchantment, an illusion where humans live as blind people with open eyes, it mirrors Plato's Allegory of the Cave, warning that humanity is chained inside a cave, mistaking passing shadows for ultimate truth.

This environment cannot be solved by human intellect alone, as standard sciences are limited by physical senses. As Immanuel Kant demonstrated, our minds only perceive the phenomenon, representing things as they appear to our flawed senses, but we can never grasp the noumenon, the thing-in-itself, through earthly logic. The universe behaves like a deceptive veil, a concept Arthur Schopenhauer understood, declaring the physical world a subjective delusion, a veil of illusion misleading the soul into identifying with matter rather than its eternal source. The book lifts this veil by explaining the invisible mechanics that govern us. It reveals a physical world driven by the friction of two conflicting forces: the electric and magnetic currents. The magnetic current causes dense thoughts and decay, while the electric current temporarily powers our standard intellect, leaving human life as an entropic descent without a permanent destiny.

The psychologist William James suggested that the human brain functions as an antenna catching a transpersonal stream of universal data. The book validates this by explaining that the human head is an extraordinary conscious apparatus, a sensitive cosmic antenna catching the chaotic currents of the material world. The solution requires no severe ascetism or complex academic degrees, but a natural realignment of our biological antenna through a process called Rational Immunization. By opening the pages of this book, the reader introduces a supreme frequency into their consciousness known as the Rational Fluid. This pure energy flows directly from the Rational World, the absolute world of our origin, acting as an energetic shield that overrides magnetic distortions, quiets chaotic internal chatter, and activates the higher cognitive centers of our mind.

This shift aligns with Teilhard de Chardin's perspective that human evolution is a purposeful movement toward a final point of convergence called the Omega Point. This destiny is echoed by Sri Aurobindo, who prophesied a supramental evolution on earth, where humanity steps out of current limitations into an immortal mode of embodied consciousness: a perfected, everlasting Rational body. Delivered through a unique pedagogical structure, the first volume acts as a welcoming portal, offering a diverse mosaic of subjects that plants the seeds of truth. Comprehension is cumulative, requiring no straining of memory, but a relaxed daily reading that allows the prose to naturally tune the apparatus. This first foundational book is the initial step of a primary Work of twenty-one books. Forming a complete step process that guides back to its pristine origins on the Rational Plain. As you embark on this positive process, confusion dissolves, replaced by universal belonging, physical vitality, and mental clarity. By aligning with this knowledge, you fulfill the purpose of human existence, entering a path that demonstrates exactly where all human beings came from and where everyone is going, ensuring an unshakeable state of peace and a triumphant return to our true eternal source.
